Stay ahead of labor policy changes

At The Capitol Forum, we believe that staying ahead of the complex regulatory environment is essential to confidently advising your clients. With a particular focus on labor policy – from noncompete litigation to union bargaining and worker misclassification – our team of investigative journalists are experts in identifying, analyzing, and predicting risk, as well as the outcomes and companies or industries impacted.

Unmatched insights and analysis in a shifting landscape

You can rely on us for breaking, non-biased insights as well as in-depth analysis. In an evolving regulatory landscape with increasing enforcement actions, you need a partner you can trust to deliver best-in-class reporting to guide your legal and business strategies. Our labor policy reporting focuses on the enforcement agencies' increasing scrutiny of competition harms to workers, helping you to better understand the shifting legal frameworks and regulatory priorities. Coverage spans from high-profile labor disputes to emerging trends in employment law and compliance risks. As policymakers and regulators continue to refine labor standards, staying informed is critical to anticipating risks and adapting to new compliance requirements.

Expert Guidance on Labor Regulations and Enforcement

When it comes to labor policy, we are experts in understanding the regulatory enforcement landscape and can help you quickly identify the anticipated timelines, agency priorities, and potential outcomes. From new rulemakings to key court decisions, we keep you updated with reporting that demystifies the process, stakeholders, and implications so that you have a thorough understanding of each agency's likely position, the legal arguments shaping labor policy, and the business impacts of regulatory and enforcement actions.
